

Short Bio

Mary Breeding is currently a Consultant at the World Bank and a Lecturer at American University. Her areas of specialization include: Program Evaluation, Governance, Politics of developing countries, South Asia, and International Migration. Dr. Breeding is interested in the performance of democratic institutions in developing countries. Through her research, she seeks to understand how informal institutions—vote banks, patron-client linkages, social norms and customs, and ethnic politics—influence both democratic institutions and economic development outcomes in low-income and middle-income countries. Dr. Breeding was a Post-doctoral Research Fellow in the School of Foreign Service at Georgetown University (2008-2010) and a Warren E. Miller Fellow at the American Political Science Association (2007-2008). She received her Ph.D. in Political Science from the School of Public Affairs at American University in 2008. Dr. Breeding has also been a Visiting Scholar at the Institute for Economic and Social Change (ISEC) in Bangalore, India since 2005.
